INTRODUCTION:

English Language Teaching is one of the developing areas in the contemporary world. English being the international language is always sought to be mastered by many. Realizing the need the department of English has included four different papers of English Language Teaching to give the necessary inputs to those students who aspire to enter into the teaching profession. Though, there was continuous emphasis on the development of communication skills in English language, it is evident that many of our students lack the same skill. When mere fundamental skill of speaking is lacking, even after having English language education for considerable years, we can understand the difficulty of developing teaching skill in English Language. As it is not our mother tongue, it becomes mandatory to study thoroughly the English language teaching practices, methods and approaches. Hence the department of English has taken initiative to organize this talk on “English Language Teaching Practice”.

ABSTRACT :

The job of showing practice in the understudies' readiness, for instructor training empowers the understudy educators to try all the information and aptitudes they have gained in the ELT course. Encouraging practice is an unavoidable program that can't be barred from the educational program since it assumes an imperative job in the instructional program. Training practice is a pragmatic encounter, which each understudy instructor must go through to have the option to modify and to have met the necessity for taking up educating as a vocation.

Training encourages one in the development of basic disposition of the creative mind, wants and thinking, which is carefully related to culture in its comprehensiveness. At the end of the day, training can be viewed as an instrument of change in the general public which each country has a solid faith in the adequacy of instruction as an amazing instrument for public turn of events. In this manner, instruction involves educating and learning for instructing and figuring out how to occur, there must be educators and the students to be educated. In this way, the powerful educating should be possible by a prepared individual called the instructor.

In our general public today, instructing is being taken care of appropriately by instructors who are instructed and ethically prepared, they ensure that they arrive at work before the understudies or students shows up. During instructing, the instructor attempts, however much as could be expected to show the understudies the subject s/he educates and this without a doubt builds the longing or inspiration with respect to the understudies to battle more diligently. Arranging the instructing additionally encourages the instructor to compose himself appropriately, clarification of the point; rearrange things for simpler comprehension by students.

The way wherein an educator tends to a class mirrors a disposition and passes on a message through what is said as well as through how it is said. Prior to addressing the class, he ensures that consideration is picked up by getting understudies quit playing and listen cautiously. The instructor builds up a decent close to home relationship with his/her understudies by cultivating common trust and regard. The educator does this adequately by monitoring every youngster as an individual and be delicate to the mind-set of the class all in all. The consciousness of individual contrasts starts with the fundamental undertaking of learning names and putting them precisely to faces. Knowing about various techniques for instructing and knowing which one to utilize and when he can show his understudies viably.

Instructing practice is a noteworthy part of understudies' groundwork for educator training. This paper is resolved to discover job of showing practice on the understudies groundwork for instructor training, how does encouraging practice upgrade the understudies information about educating, does encouraging practice open understudies to keeping great homeroom the board, does instructing practice opens understudies to how hypothesis is converged with reasonable.
